How much do you spend on bras?

I can tell you that for ME, they're the ONE thing that I HATE buying. Why? Well, first of all no one sees them (well, almost no one - but I've been married to him for 30 years, so...). Second of all - my bra's cost somewhere between $35 - $40 each and I seem to RUIN them on a VERY regular basis.

How?

Well, I toss them in the washer with everything else. If you're like me, you know what happens next - the straps get pulled and become too long, the hooks get caught on threads of other items and sometimes PULL, and the cups get lumpy and out of shape. SHOOT - I just realized that I should have started this review with a WARNING for the guys. Oh well.

Hand wash? Who has the time (or even remembers). If I PLAN to hand wash my bras and panties, I can be sure that when it's time to get dressed, that there'll be none in my lingerie drawer....because they're still sitting in the "hand wash pile" in the laundry room.

Then, along comes Berry Ball. A ball that you put your bra's into and pop in the washer. The Berry Ball allows your niceties to stay in shape, while being washed with your other clothes right in the washing machine (but please, don't put it in the dryer). Inside of each of the balls is a SCRUBBING ball, allowing the bra to be washed on both the INSIDE as well as the outside. Also included with each Berry Ball is a Berry Bag - perfect for your panties or even SETS of socks (no more losing socks in the washer).

At $13.99 - the Berry Ball will actually help me save money (since if my bras stay in shape longer - I won't be throwing away $40 on a new one as often).

I LOVE my Berry Ball. They come in sizes from Small to Large (depending upon your bra size). The ONLY issue that I've had with it is that I have a smaller washer and a larger bra size. I found that I had to put the Berry Ball into my washer open and then close it up once it got past the top of the agitator. I have a weird washing machine though, and I'm guessing that 99% of you would be able to just toss it in.

My bras are looking much better than they used to when they'd come out of the wash, and now I can spend that extra money that I USED to spend on bras on something that people can actually see (like shoes or jewelry or.....).

The Berry Ball is available for purchase at n-fini for $13.99 as well as other fine lingerie dealers.
