The movie version of "Eat Pray Love" isn't due for release until Friday, but it is already inspiring retailers, designers — and shoppers — with its refined Bohemian style. It's a subtle buzz, just like the chic clothes featured in the film. Based on the best-selling book by Elizabeth Gilbert and starring Julia Roberts and Javier Bardem, the plot takes the main character around the globe, from the United States to Italy, India and Indonesia. Of course, Roberts' character picks up plenty of beautiful pieces of jewelry and clothing along the way. Getting the look reminds me of the early- and mid-'90s world-inspired fashions. Here are some of the many ways you can pick up the "Eat Pray Love" style.

- » Smell like it. Perfumer Fresh has released three new fragrances based on the book and film ($32 for 1-ounce bottles, available at www.fresh.com).
- » A laid-back traveler's hat, like a Hat Attack raffia crochet fedora ($82, hatattack.com) will shield your eyes from the bright midday sun of warmer climes.

- » Inspired by the film, designer Sue Wong has released a line to be sold on HSN and online through department stores, including Saks and Nordstrom. HSN is launching one of its biggest online campaigns based on the movie, selling beauty items, home decor, jewelry, accessories and clothing that fit into the movie's nomadic theme. Visit www.suewong.com to see more of the line.
- » Locally, Village Experience offers shoppers a multitude of ways to taste the world from the comfy Broad Ripple catbird seat. The store is stocked with fair-trade items from around the world. What better way to get a global look than to start with a simple scarf? Village Experience is at 6055 N. College Ave. (317) 602-3696, www.experiencethevillage.com.
- » Cost Plus World Market has opened its own movie tie-in, an "Eat Pray Love" store within the store. Shoppers can find home decor and accessories, such as colorful beaded stretch bracelets for $5.99. The local outlet for Cost Plus World Market is at 2200 E. 116th St., Carmel. (317) 706-0400, www.worldmarket.com.

DELICATE JOB

» We should hand-wash our bras and other delicates, but the washing machine just seems cleaner. Enter Berry Ball, a vented plastic ball in which you place your bras and drop in the washing machine. An agitator ball inside does the work; you just take them out and air-dry. Berry Ball is available through www.comforhouse.com/berryball.

SUMMER HELP

» Sally Hershberger is a woman who knows hair. I've seen her attack and fix some serious messes on "America's Next Top Model." Hershberger's eponymous line of keratin sprays and shaping creams ($12.50 each) and available at ULTA) are a great help in these summer days of dry, damaged hair.

HEALTHY FUNGUS

» Quiet and shy and preferring the shade, mushrooms' healing powers are usually overlooked. I was excited to try Dr. Andrew Weil for Origins Mega-Mushroom Skin Relief serum ($66 for 1.7 fluid ounces, www.origins.com). The serum tingles just a little when I put it on before bedtime; I like to think it's recharging my skin.
