Let's be honest: no one actually likes shopping for other people. It's boring. The malls are so crowded you're guaranteed to get run over by a stroller at least once. And every year, you face one of two shopping scenarios:

Scenario One: You spend hours sleuthing the crowded mall for a perfect, passive-aggressive gift for the cojerk who happened to draw in your office's Secret Santa. How do you send an insult wrapped in pretty paper? Read on.

Scenario Two: You have a friend who has expensive bridezilla tastes. She always manages to find you that sweater you've been lusting after. You resort to giving her a bundle of Bath and Body Works lotions. Everyone needs more soap right? Wrong. Find out how to get her a personal gift she'll actually like.

Here are a few inexpensive gift suggestions for your friends and your frenemies:

Gifts for Friends

Berry Ball

It's not quite stocking sized but the Berry Ball is a practical gift for girls who find their bras in a bundle. Give her the time saving gift of not having to untangle her dainties from her towels with this protective lingerie cleaning solution. It's big enough for a few pairs of granny panties or a bra and it goes right into the laundry.
